

August 27, 2013

NYC Rooftop Bars: Our 2013 End Of Summer Drinking Guide

Rooftop bars are the perfect place to enjoy a warm summer evening. Between soaking up the sun, checking out the views and sipping a cocktail, it's no wonder that more and more open air bars are popping up along the city skyline. From Eataly's rooftop beer garden to a just-opened cocktail spot in Midtown, here are our favorite places to drink outdoors.

Jimmy at the James Hotel

Above the hustle and bustle of SoHo streets the James Hotel offers visitors a chance to unwind with a drink while taking in 360 degree views of lower Manhattan. In addition to a wading pool and cotton chaise lounges, the rooftop features indoor bar seating. Wherever you choose to sit, be sure to check out the expertly done cocktails including the Mexican Honey Bee, a combination of reposado tequila, orange flower, honey, mezcal, lemon and lavender bitters.

[Photo via]

Jimmy at The James
15 Thompson Street