

Condé Nast Traveler

September 9, 2013

New York
THE LATEST TIPS, NEWS, AND TRAVEL IDEAS The Daily Traveler

New York Fashion Week Secrets: Where to Hang with Madonna, Jason Wu, and More

Models Alejanda Cata, Rachelle Gouking, and Eleni Tasavousis at Jimmy at the James Hotel

New York is buzzing with celebrities and models any time of year, but the city is especially overrun with the beautiful people during Fashion Week. Though you can spot famous faces everywhere, there are a select few spots you need to hit up if you really want to rub shoulders with the "it" crowd. We have the scoop:

Best for Model-Spotting: Jimmy at The James Hotel

Jimmy, the trendy bar located on the rooftop of the James Hotel in New York's Soho neighborhood, is a hub for models and all those in the fashion world, according to Jimmy part-owner David Rabin. Models Alejanda Cata, Rachelle Gouking, and Eleni Tasavousis (pictured above), among other fashion heavyweights, were snapped at the Jimmy in between runway shows. It's no surprise—the intimate downtown spot offers a chic 70s-inspired atmosphere, strong cocktails, and privacy from the Midtown frenzy. Rumor has it that current "it" model Cara Delevingne also frequents the establishment.